Manager commentary

» October highlighted the balance between inflation risks and investment opportunities. Concerns over the returns generated from artificial intelligence spending weighed on equity markets, while renewed Middle East tensions lifted oil prices and reinforced inflation concerns. Against this backdrop, longer-dated government bonds offered increasingly attractive yields, providing an opportunity to secure income at valuations that better compensated investors for the risks of lending over longer periods.

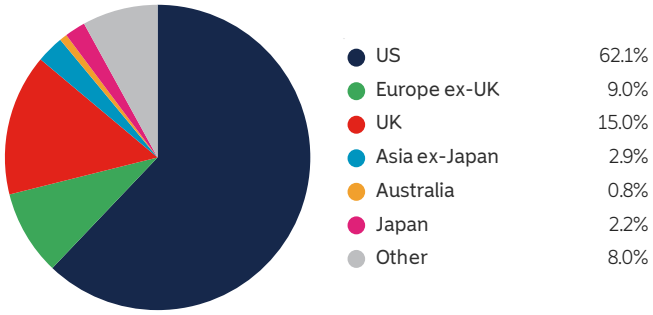

» Around the middle of the month, we extended duration across the Harmony portfolios as longer-dated government bonds had become more attractive from both an income and valuation perspective. After largely avoiding this part of the market over the past year, we reduced holdings in shorter-dated US Treasury and gilt holdings to buy a nominal US Treasury maturing in 2050. The additional yield available for holding longer-maturity bonds, known as the term premium, is near its highest level in over 15 years, strengthening the investment case on both income and value grounds. These cash-neutral trades increase sensitivity to changes in bond yields, but their effect on total portfolio risk remains modest when considered alongside other asset classes. We retain flexibility to increase the position if yields rise further.
