■ Manager commentary

The Momentum GF Global Equity Fund experienced a gain of 1.7% in January 2024, measured in US dollars, outperforming the MSCI World's 1.2% return.

After a strong year in 2023, large-cap growth stocks continued to be the strongest performers, while smaller caps continued to lag behind. The magnificent seven stocks had a more subdued month, with an equal-weighted magnificent seven portfolio delivering 2.6%. There were some wild variations within the magnificent seven, with Nvidia delivering +24.2% as the AI theme remained strong, and Tesla falling 24.6% after a period of falling demand and persistent price cuts.

The portfolio is underweight Tesla and holds overweight positions in Mazda (+15.3%), Honda (+10.2%), and Subaru (+11.6%). So overall, Automobile Manufacturers added around 30bps of alpha.

The market's recognition of companies that will benefit from Artificial Intelligence continues to broaden. The portfolio holds Super Micro Computer, which gained 86% in the month. They sell liquid-cooled servers and have a range that support Nvidia chips. This range is experiencing tremendous growth, and the market re-rated the shares.

On the negative side, the strong performance of Nvidia was the largest negative contributor. The portfolio has a holding of 1.4% versus the index's 2.0%.
